Venapro is Not a Scam

The product was tested on a trial group of 100 people suffering from hemorrhoids. The results proved that 94 per cent of those tested noticed a significant reduction in irritation and pain. Respondents also indicated that there was a reduction in stool blood -97 per cent. The most significant result was that nearly all of the people involved in the test found some type of benefit by using Venapro when suffering from hemorrhoids. The patients were followed through a period of time and 92 per cent of the people reported a full recovery. The remaining eight per cent were not fully cured but said they'd a lot of relief in addition to great improvements in their condition. With these amazing results, it is apparent that is no such thing as a Venapro Scam.

What are the physician treatments of hemorrhoids? One of the most effective is the outpatient application of specific rubber bands to the hemorrhoids. A patient can have up to three bands a week. Some doctors sclerose (inject it with irritant substance in order to make it shrink) the hemorrhoids by injecting them with 5% slimy phenol, but the results are not as good as with banding. Some clinics make use of infrared coagulation, cryotherapy (freezing), or various forms of cautery with mixed results. When hemorrhoids are too severe, either open or closed, hemorrhoidectomy is done in the operating room. The results are generally good, but the time to recovery could be lengthy. There have been some good operative results with simply tying over hemorrhoidal artery.

When hemorrhoids strike, symptoms are felt through the building of lumps beneath the anus. Itching and burning sensations are also felt in the same spot when sitting for long a long period of time. Furthermore, the presence of blood stains in stools and toilet tissue is apparent. The sight of blood in stools and anus often give a scare to many. It is a rare occurrence that we see blood from that part of the body so we are often alarmed at the sight of it.

Grapeseed - Grapeseed extract is considered as a treatment for bleeding hemorrhoids because it has been clinically proven to bring back weakened veins. Grapeseed also enhances the elasticity in veins making it effective to cure anal bleeding.

Why Do Hemorrhoids Bleed?

When the lumps have grown in size, more blood is stagnated in the veins. When you sit down, the veins get squeezed and they bleed out. Aside from that, when you are constipated, hard stools that pass the anus scratch the hemorrhoids, thus producing small cuts and scrapes and so they bleed.

Hemorrhoids: Painless Rectal Bleeding

Hemorrhoids are varicose sort veins of the anal area. They are much like a surgical glove squeezed in the fingers to create a big bulge. These bumps filled with blood coagulate and form clots. This kind of stretching of the blood vessel created pain, and the clot maintains stretching of the vein producing continued pain. New straining after unique formation of the clot, i.e. from constipation, bowel movements, labour or some other form of constriction of the stomach can further stretch this already broadened blood vessel and forms a new thin layer throughout the clot increasing the clot size causing more and more ongoing pain.

Before a hemorrhoid has reached a bleeding stage, it is often just a small inflamed vein inside the anus. This happened because the vein was put under too much pressure such as over-straining in your bowel movement, heavy lifting weights, and childbirth. When too much pressure is exerted in the anal and pelvic region, the veins surrounding the rectal walls get irritated and distended and so they swell up. This condition is similar to that of varicose veins in the legs.

The Key Ingredients of Venapro

Venapro uses only natural ingredients. These include herbs and minerals which usually work by triggering a response from the immune system. This then reduces the pain that is associated with hemorrhoids. The Venapro Ingredients are some of the most effective hemorrhoid treatments currently available.

What is a Natural Treatment for Bleeding Hemorrhoids?

The good news is that there is a natural treatment for bleeding hemorrhoids. These treatments are made from natural ingredients and do not pose serious side effects compared to medicinal drugs, some of these safe remedies are:

People who have occupations that require prolonged sitting, for example like truck drivers, get hemorrhoids, as do people who do a lot of heavy lifting. Fighter pilots get hemorrhoids from gravity and fighting in opposition to G-forces. Pregnant ladies get hemorrhoids, as mentioned, from pelvic congestion, but later from pushing the baby out during the latter part of labor. Probably the most common cause is straining at bowel movement secondary to chronic constipation.

Patients desperate to find treatment for bleeding hemorrhoids have turned on the internet, hoping to find solutions from fellow hemorrhoid sufferers on how to manage the disease.

“ This thin stretched vessel has pressure receptors in it that are perceived as pressure pain and can be inflamed by sitting, direct trauma, toilet paper or restraining. If you've ever had these, you know how uncomfortable they can be. Also known as "piles", they occur for a number of reasons. One cause is gravity. The veins from higher up on the anus start to decrease down due to the laxity of the tissue as we grow older. Another cause is the pelvic congestion due to prolonged sitting, straining with hard work or trying to have a bowel movement, or perhaps by the pelvic congestion of pregnancy. Initial symptoms can be a tad alarming. Maybe it's a small amount of fresh blood on the tissue paper after a bowel movement. Then there is the vague itching, generalized discomfort and downright pain that can accompany hemorrhoids. Add to that the discovery of "lumps" in the area by the sufferer, and you have the makings of a panic.

We Don't Know for Sure What Percentage of the Population Gets Hemorrhoids

In the us the number who present for medical care of hemorrhoids are about 4%. In Great Britain, where they have Socialized Medicine, about 30% of patients present for treatment of this condition. We know in america that the sale of over-the-counter products for them goes into the billions of dollars.

- When bleeding hemorrhoids have developed into a chronic stage, there are methods to get rid of them permanently.

Does Venapro Have Any Side Effects?

During a study of 100 patients suffering from Venapro not one participant complained of any types of Venapro side effects. This is most likely due from the fact that it is a natural product. As a result, it is free from any harmful artificial chemicals.

What are the treatments for hemorrhoids? Well, believe it or not, increasing fiber in the diet is an excellent treatment for all signs. Stool softeners haven't been found to help that much. Fiber decreases bleeding and irritative symptoms. Witch Hazel and glycerin astringent wipes can be very soothing in order to painful hemorrhoids and also can often relieve irritation. Sometimes, warm sitz baths several times a day can help, as well as sitting on an inflatable "doughnut" cushion (decreases direct pressure and pinching). If there is an acute clot in a hemorrhoidal vein, it may respond to intermittent ice packs. Occasionally, the E.R. or family doctor can make a tiny cut in the hemorrhoid and let the clot out, resulting in great relief as well as final healing.

So, what's the take-home message? Hemorrhoids are the most common cause of bright red anal bleeding, itching and pain, but this simply cannot be assumed in every circumstance. The doctor is going to have to examine your anus. There are plenty of other things which can cause these symptoms. Please leave your embarrassment in the waiting room and tell the doctor what's been going on. The one thing to remember when sitting in the waiting room is you're not alone, and the more open you are with your doctor the better help he/she can provide for you to obtaining better. If you are over 50 or have risk factors for colon cancer, you probably need anoscopy and colonoscopy. These are very benign tests in this day and age. Once all the more significant opportunities have been ruled out, then you can start a comprehensive program to treat and handle hemorrhoids, and you will "live happily ever after."

Hemorrhoidectomy Infrared Coagulation and Injection Sclerotherapy Doctors take on surgery only as a last resort. Oftentimes, hemorrhoids persist and the symptoms recur over time prompting the doctor to remove them surgically. Unless your hemorrhoids are hard to manage and providing you with excruciating pain, it is still better and safe to stick to the natural methods of treatment for bleeding hemorrhoids.

But this is a health issue and need to be confronted; even the issue of embarrassment and fear of surgery have to be dealt with. Hemorrhoid is not only debilitating but serious as well. It affects the quality of your life as you can't go to places that require prolong sitting. If you suffer in silence and foregoing their favorite activities or miss attending their child or grandchild school activities, it is time to take action.

Imagine for a moment that you are looking into the anal area through an anoscope. There is a circular line around the mucosa where muscles attach to the outer anal sphincter called the "dentate" (or "pectinate") line. If hemorrhoids are above the dentate line, they are called "external," and if they are below the dentate line they are called "internal." The external ones are more easily seen and felt, while a person may be unaware that they have internal hemorrhoids.

Horse Chestnut

Another natural treatment for bleeding hemorrhoids is the Horse chestnut seed extract. It is used to treat severe enlargement of veins by minimizing the swelling and regulating blood circulation. This is most ideal for pregnant women to regulate blood flow in the lower extremities of the body.
